In the summer of 2023, I developed a program that turned corporate waste into an opportunity for hundreds of vulnerable sector individuals entering the work force.

At the time, gently used handmade leather work boots were being discarded by the dozen, some worn less than a day.

Using my position in retail, I built a donation program that collected these used boots from stores and donated them to local NGOs that support people experiencing homelessness and other barriers to employment.

This data represents the first three months of our efforts. As of 2026—the program has donated well over $100 000 CAD in work boots, helping hundreds of people learn a skilled trade and give new life to handmade boots that were bound for the landfill.

I’m grateful to have worked alongside so many dedicated people and organizations to help bring this vision to life.
